saying that they love blogging, but they don't have time to do it. Many of them have a full time job and juggle a family. Well, here's a tip for you: work smarter not harder. Put a few things into play and you'll find that you have time for blogging. While I love my job, I had to make some adjustments. The first one was having to stop taking meetings on Mondays because they were pulling me out of my writing Monday to Friday. The second was having to give up going out on Tuesday nights because that was a night when I would normally have a client and blog post. Instead, I've picked Thursday nights as a new night to write. Now, Thursday is my only night when I can write, read and blog. I also wrote to a specific audience. I wrote to other romance writers. Because of this I had to start sharing my posts on other social media. I've found this to be a great way to help spread my love of all things romance. So, how do I do it? I write 4-6 pieces a week and focus on the ones that I enjoy the most. Then, I promote them. I've found that if I do that and interact with people I'll naturally share my content. Sharing content is good for my blog, so that's how I got into this niche. Another thing that I've found to help is adding a post schedule to my blog. I started a Friday Followers Post to share new content and promote it. I also have a Thursday
