Matlock is an American police procedural mystery and legal drama series starring Harry Tasker as Lieutenant Mark Matlock, a consulting detective for the Kansas City Police Department. It is an adaptation of the 1970–75 TV series of the same name, created by producer Robert Baril and co-writer Earl Hamner, Jr.. The case pertains to a dead German couple found in a farmhouse in the mountains of rural Texas. Matlock partners with the younger Mitchum to find clues and solve the crime.

This includes issues concerning the underground railroad. It is a continuing serial; after this season, Matlock was unofficially renamed Mark Matlock, in reference to Tasker, who played the detective in the TV series from 1970 to 1975. Matlock is a detective in Kansas City, whose first cases are always closed. The show features a 'pawnbroker' – a kind of detective - who also works for Matlock, and several different recurring supporting characters (some of whom return from the original TV series), each of whom has their own techniques and mannerisms. It also features several recurring storylines. Matlock was sometimes included in pop culture references, most notably in the Saturday Night Live sketch "I Want a New Partner" (Saturday Night Live) and the 1987 Simpsons episode "Matlock".
