It was a tough move for a family man with a young son, but Baffert found it worth it. "It was a chance to move on and try to make a difference for myself and for my team," Baffert said Sunday during a media conference call. He ended up building some great horses. Now, Baffert is about to bring it all together in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes as the main guy in the bet, with trainer Chad Brown Jr., who built a great reputation at Churchill Downs working for Hall of Fame trainer Dale Romans. Baffert seemed to enjoy the thought of possibly riding Arrogate, the 7-2 shot, in Sunday's Preakness Stakes, but in his heart, he'll be working with his own horses. "We've got three great colts and he's going to be better than all of them," Baffert said. "So I've got to come out of the gate with him. I can't be caught up in him."
